NSW Teachers Federation 2010 Annual Conference Decisions: Aboriginal Education - 25 Year Approach: The Way Forward

The NSW Teachers Federation will continue its long history and tradition of supporting the rights of Aboriginal students and their communities. Building on earlier decisions the Federation developed its first comprehensive policy on Aboriginal education in 1980. Six years later, Federation established the permanent identified position of Aboriginal Education Coordinator. Federation will continue to lead the way forward and demonstrate commitment to Aboriginal education for the next 25 years and beyond.

In 2010, the real life situation faced by Aboriginal students and their communities remains the most pressing human rights issue in our society that confronts the Australian nation.

Federation recognises that persisting with 'more of the same' will not bring about essential, across-the-board institutional change within Australian governments, education authorities and systems. Achieving equality of educational outcomes for Aboriginal students will not occur unless new and innovative approaches are embraced.

Significantly raising Aboriginal students' achievement in education to the levels achieved by non-Aboriginal students must be the highest priority of all Australian governments, education departments, schools and other learning institutions. There are three aspects which need to be addressed to bring about long term, sustainable change and an equality of educational outcomes. There has to be change to the Australian Constitution; a societal change where there is respect for Aboriginal Identity; and a lifelong learning approach to Aboriginal education for the attainment of positive outcomes.

The purpose and function of formal education for Aboriginal people will be better achieved in a national and political environment that officially and legally acknowledges and respects the rights of Aboriginal people. The Australian nation must move to establish, in Australian law, an inclusive relationship between the Australian state and Aboriginal people.

It is the function and responsibility of public schooling and further public education to deliver equal educational outcomes. Government must provide quality, well-funded educational and community programs that allow educational institutions to continually improve outcomes for Aboriginal students for at least 25 years. The success of educational institutions to achieve the outcomes required can either be assisted or hindered by the local, regional and national environments in which they exist.

All political parties, unions and major community organisations must commit to a national dialogue to achieve agreement to recognize the prior sovereignty and legal rights of Aboriginal people in the Australian Constitution. This process will lead to amending both the preamble and the body of the Australian Constitution to acknowledge sovereignty and the rights of Aboriginal people as the First Peoples of this nation.

Bi-partisan support is also needed to establish a national dialogue to determine whether Australia should establish a legislative bill of rights as a mechanism to ensure greater protection of the civil and human rights of Australian citizens.

It is only by the establishment of such legal instruments that genuine respect will be demonstrated at the national level. Only then will mutual respect become part of the fabric of an Australian nation that truly acknowledges its past and what it represents for the future of its First Peoples.

The positive reinforcement of Aboriginal Identity in the wider national community is essential for educational institutions to achieve improved educational outcomes. However, the internal culture of each educational institution must also demonstrate respect and reinforcement of Aboriginal Identity and culture.

Educational institutions must successfully create an environment whereby Aboriginal students and their community feel respected and acknowledged and where their wellbeing and Aboriginal Identity is strengthened and reinforced. The establishment of such an environment is also a necessary pre-requisite within these institutions for Aboriginal students and their communities to achieve improved educational outcomes. Government must also expand Aboriginal language programs, thus ensuring Aboriginal languages play an integral part in enhancing students' understanding of culture and maintaining their cultural identity.

The ability of the education system to achieve equal educational outcomes is related to the skills that a child has developed at the time of enrolment in school. A child's entry level skills at enrolment correlate to a number of factors including the child's socio-economic background, educational achievement of the carers, whether a child attended playgroup or pre-school, and the type of educational programs delivered at the pre-school.

Commitment to the Aboriginal people must be across all domains - in education, health, housing, economic participation, social indicators, governance and leadership. These are foundation building blocks which have to be implemented by the Federal Government and by all States and Territories, to gain equality in outcomes and address the advancement of the First Peoples of our nation. The maintenance of this will need commitment in perpetuity.

In the light of the Close the Gap – Statement of Intent health agreement (3 June 2010) between the NSW Premier and NSW Opposition Leader, "to work in a bi-partisan spirit to close the 17 year life expectancy gap between Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal Australians within 20 years", there must be bi-partisan support at all levels of government to provide support for Aboriginal parents and their children. This will require increased funding to develop and implement, in collaboration with local communities, system wide programs that support Aboriginal mothers during pregnancy and parents/caregivers up until the time of a child's school enrolment.

Where a government school serves an Aboriginal community, a pre-school should be attached to the local primary school. All Aboriginal children should be encouraged and where it is needed, assisted to attend pre-school. Transport assistance is especially required in many communities to ensure that pre-school aged children can attend pre-school and to enable caregivers and young children to access interagency services.

Government needs to significantly increase the provision of Support Teacher Learning Assistance resources to schools with Aboriginal students, and provide adequate resources to assist these children in Years K to 6. Too many Aboriginal children continue to progress through primary school with low literacy and numeracy achievement levels.

At present 60% of the national enrolment of Aboriginal students in public education is in New South Wales (30%) and Queensland (30%). If outcomes are not significantly improved in these states then it will not be possible to achieve equal outcomes nationally.

On 13 February 2008 in the National Apology to the Stolen Generations, Australia acknowledged the need for our nation to say 'Sorry' for the previous injustices inflicted upon generations of Aboriginal people. 'Sorry' is never enough when followed by a lack of change and action.

Statement of Principles

Principles are described in terms of the right of all Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students to high quality schooling and the rights and responsibilities of parents as the first educators of their children.

1. Schooling acknowledges the capacity of all young Aboriginal people to learn by:

- 1.1 providing a climate that welcomes and values all Aboriginal students and has high expectations for their educational outcomes;
- 1.2 establishing effective teaching/learning relationships between the educator and the Aboriginal learner;
- 1.3 encouraging all Aboriginal students to attend school regularly, be actively engaged and to participate in a meaningful and confident manner;
- 1.4 expecting all Aboriginal children to attain a high standard of literacy and numeracy;
- 1.5 providing a curriculum which:
 - (i) allows Aboriginal students to share in the same educational opportunities experienced by other Australian students and which allows them to be strong in their own culture and language,
 - (ii) supports all students to understand and acknowledge the value of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cultures to Australian society,
 - (iii) supports and builds on the reconciliation process between Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal Australians;
- 1.6 increasing the number of Aboriginal people employed within the work place;
- 1.7 engaging community members and increasing their involvement in the workplace;

2. Schooling acknowledges the role of Aboriginal parents/caregivers as the first educators of their children by:

- 2.1 providing a climate that welcomes Aboriginal parents and caregivers as valuable members of the school community and values their input;
- 2.2 supporting parents and caregivers of Aboriginal students in their responsibilities to ensure that their children attend school regularly.

Educational institutions acknowledge the close relationship between quality education, high expectations and a successful contribution to Australian society.

Annual Aboriginal Education Profile: Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Education Strategy

The NSWTF Annual Aboriginal Education Profile has been developed to assist all educational workplaces and organisations to work through a process from the grassroots level up through to senior management and corporate leadership levels.

The aim of the Annual Aboriginal Education Profile (AAEP) is to assist all educators and their local community to assess what is happening within their workplaces for all students and their communities in Aboriginal education.

This Annual Aboriginal Education Profile (AAEP) will:

- assist and enable workplaces to develop a stronger strategic approach in Aboriginal Education for all students
- enhance workplaces to further develop and establish an environment that encourages engaged learning and informs all staff and all students about the importance of Aboriginal Identity, Belonging and connection to Country for Aboriginal people, and the engagement and confidence of Aboriginal community.

The Annual Aboriginal Education Profile (AAEP) strategic approach will enhance further engagement to:

- process, re-evaluate and refresh their identified outcomes for Aboriginal students and their communities
- provide a framework for the accountability measures required by federal, state and territory jurisdictions, and Aboriginal communities
- assist individual educational workplace leaders to discuss matters of current concern in Aboriginal education
- discuss NSWTF Aboriginal Education – 25 Years Approach: The Way Forward
- consult widely with all staff members, Aboriginal staff members and especially with their Aboriginal communities before using this AAEP or any of the strategies it suggests
- plan how to use and adapt the AAEP in relation to specific focus on Aboriginal education in individual settings and particular contexts
- develop professional development /in-service activities and cultural immersion courses
- reflect on your workplace achievement in terms of strengthening its Aboriginal Education Policy - 25Years Approach: The Way Forward
- action your Public Schools NSW Strategic Directions- Creating Futures Together 2015-2017 – Key Direction for Aboriginal Education

A Promise to Our Future Generations is Equitable Quality Public Education

The First Peoples, Aboriginal Australians, still remain the most disproportionately disadvantaged Australians.

All communities and workplaces may reproduce and adapt this document for their specific needs.
